He also felt that the rich farm lands surrounding such a school should furnish much of the necessary income. With money raised largely in England, over 3,000 acres were purchased. Scranton's Advice

Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania hit two birds with one oratorical stone in his address before the American Bar Association. He hit the notion that the radical right has any legitimate place in the Republican party. At the same time, he also took a crack at the belief that the GOP must purge itself of these extremists.

These views are not as incompatible as they may seem on first thought. As Scranton noted in arguing against a purge, "The party need only refuse to water down or suppress its majority views and the radical fringe will not need to be driven out—they will leave of their own accord."

If Republican leaders take this advice to heart, they will be able to save themselves much trouble and the party much inner turmoil. The extremists can best be dealt with by insisting on sound, moderate positions that they cannot stomach.

Is Anyone Out There!

There was widespread disappointment when the first photographs of Mars were interpreted as almost ruling out any chance of there being intelligent life on that neighboring planet. Some persons who fancy themselves as hard-headed realists, not to be taken in by any romantic men-from-Mars nonsense, find this amusing. They see an element of wry comedy in man's yen not to be alone in the universe; they picture man as a ludicrous figure. standing on the beach of his own tiny world and calling into the vast ocean of space, "Is anyone there?"

Perhaps this does have a touch of the comic in it, but it would be foolish to make too much of that. The fact is, when man poses this question he is expressing a profound spiritual and rational hunger which reveals much about the essential nature of humanity. He would not be man if he did not ask the question.

Nor is it a silly, romantic question. as self-styled realists may suggest. In recent times, scientists best qualified to ponder this matter have moved steadily toward the conclusion that there almost surely is intelligent life elsewhere in the universe. By now the probabilities are such that scientists find it hard to support the contrary conclusion that there is no extra-terrestrial life.

As for Mars, happily not even the Mariner 4 pictures of a barren surface without evidence that there has ever been water say: No life here. So eminent an authority as Dr. Joshua Lederberg of Stanford University, a Nobel Prize winner, is still hopeful and thinks life may exist on "oases." Some other experts share this optimism. We're all for truth, bitter or not, but we kind of hope that Dr. Lederberg and his like-thinking colleagues will prove to be right.

DEATH OF JACOB STRAWN - As the leaves begin to droop in the early fall, so are our early settlers ripening by the frost of years, and one by one, are falling into the grave. This summer has been marked by the demise of several of the oldest and most prominent settlers of Morgan county. Scranton's Advice

Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania hit two birds with one oratorical stone in his address before the American Bar Association. He hit the notion that the radical right has any legitimate place in the Republican party. At the same time, he also took a crack at the belief that the GOP must purge itself of these extremists.

These views are not as incompatible as they may seem on first thought. As Scranton noted in arguing against a purge. "The party need only refuse to water down or suppress its majority views and the radical fringe will not need to be driven out—they will leave of their own accord."

If Republican leaders take this advice to heart, they will be able to save themselves much trouble and the party much inner turmoil. The extremists can best be dealt with by insisting on sound, moderate positions that they cannot stomach.

Anyone Out There!

There was widespread disappointment when the first photographs of Mars were interpreted as almost ruling out any chance of there being intel-...ligent life on that neighboring planet. Some persons who fancy themselves "as hard-headed realists, not to be taken in by any romantic men-from-Mars Inonsense, find this amusing. They see an element of wry comedy in man's yen not to be alone in the universe; they picture man as a ludicrous figure, "standing on the beach of his own tiny world and calling into the vast ocean of space, "Is anyone there?"

Perhaps this does have a touch of ""the comic in it, but it would be foolish to make too much of that. The fact is, when man poses this question he is expressing a profound spiritual and rational hunger which reveals much -about the essential nature of humanity. He would not be man if he did not ask the question.

Nor is it a silly, romantic question, as self-styled realists may suggest. In recent times, scientists best qualified to ponder this matter have moved steadily toward the conclusion that there almost surely is intelligent life elsewhere in the universe. By now the probabilities are such that scientists find it hard to support the contrary conclusion that there is no extra-terrestrial life.

As for Mars, happily not even the Mariner 4 pictures of a barren surface without evidence that there has ever been water say: No life here. So eminent an authority as Dr. Joshua Lederberg of Stanford University, a Nobel Prize winner, is still hopeful and thinks life may exist on "oases." Some other experts share this optimism. We're all for truth, bitter or not, but we kind of hope that Dr. Lederberg and his like-thinking colleagues will prove to be right.

One of the things that marks an expert's play of the cards is his careful attention to apparently unimportant low cards. These cards mean nothing to most players and whereas the expert follows suit carefully the average player lets his lowest cards go automatically.

South was one of those careless players. He looked over dummy for a second and noted that he had nine tricks unless something unfortunate happened to dummy's diamond suit.

He gathered in the first spade trick and promptly played out his six of diamonds. West played low and dummy's queen held the trick. Then came the king of diamonds. East discarded the six of spades and all of a sudden South had a problem.

It was a really tough problem because there was no solution. South had no more chance to make his contract than he would have to unscramble an

An expert would never have had any problem at all. His lead at trick two would have been the ten of diamonds, not the six. He wouldn't have really had to think since experts learn to unblock automatically and expert South would have recognized the possibility of that ten-nine of diamonds forming a block

Then he would have completed the unblock by dropping the nine of diam ands next and would have been able to finesse successfully against the jack on the third lead of the suit after returning to his hand.

The hair can be removed several ways. It can be shaved off, erased by a depilatory, abrasive or waxing, or removed by tweezing However, all of these methods are temporary and must be repeated frequently to There is only one permanent way of doing the job and that's by electrolysis.

In electrolysis the papilla, which is source of the hair's life, is destroyed thus killing hair's growth

The latest method of electrolysis that has been perfected is called thermolysis t operates via a short wave machine, the principle of which is to coagulate the hair papilla by high frequency current.

The Aug. 31, 1865, issue of the Jacksonville JOURNAL carried this item:

DEATH OF JACOB STRAWN - As the leaves begin to droop in the early fall, so are our early settlers ripening by the frost of years, and one by one, are falling into the grave. This summer has been marked by the demise of several of the oldest and most prominent settlers of Morgan county. On Wednesday last, Mr. Jacob Strawn, the "king farmer of the new world," died at his residence four miles south-west of this city. He was sixty-five years old, had run his race and closed his accounts preparatory to the retirement of a quiet rest.

Jacob Strawn, a giant in every sense of the word, died of dropsy Aug. 23, 1865. He was a big man physically, raw-boned, 210 pounds at his prime, with a head a little too large for his frame. He was a mildmannered man, completely honest, very active, and before he died he gave the title to 18,000 acres of good land in Morgan wife and children.

Specialist or Jack-of-all-Trades?

More and more, our graduate schools are preparing young men and women for the "Age of Specialization." The jack-of-all-trades can no longer give satisfactory service if he tries to cope with all of the problems in any particular field. Specialization has become almost mandatory as the horizons of knowledge continue to expand. Savings and loan associations are specialists. They specialize in two fields—savings and home loans. Today, savings and loan associations provide the facilities for 37,000,000 people to save their money with safety and profit.

Today, savings and loan associations make more home loans than all other financial institutions combined, over 1,000,000 in 1964 alone.

This specialization provides better services for you and the people in your community. If you are planning to open a savings account or want a home loan to fit your individual need, come in and see us. We are specialists.

One of the things that marks an expert's play of the cards is his careful attention to apparently unimportant low cards. These cards mean nothing to most players and whereas the expert follows suit carefully the average player lets his lowest cards go automatically.

South was one of those careless players. He looked over dummy for a second and noted that he had nine tricks unless something unfortunate happened to dummy's diamond

He gathered in the first spade trick and promptly played out his six of diamonds. West played low and dummy's queen held the trick. Then came the king of diamonds. East discarded the six of spades and all of a sudden South had a problem.

It was a really tough prob lem because there was no solution. South had no more chance to make his contract than he would have to unscramble an

An expert would never have had any problem at all. His lead at trick two would have been the ten of diamonds, not the six. He wouldn't have really had to think since experts learn to unblock automatically and expert South would have recognized the possibility of that ten-nine of diamonds forming a block.

Then he would have completed the unblock by dropping the nine of diamonds next and would have been able to finesse successfully against the jack on the third lead of the suit after returning to his hand.

WHAT'S ELECTROLYSIS?

There are few things more embarrassing to a woman than a patch of unwanted flous growth of hair on her upper lip or on her cheek usually causes extreme selfconsciousness and unhappi-

The hair can be removed several ways. It can be shaved off, erased by a depilatory, abrasive or waxing, or removed by tweezing. However, all of these methods are temporary and must be repeated frequently to keep the hair under control. There is only one permanent way of doing the job and that's by electrolysis.

In electrolysis the papilla, which is source of the hair's life, is destroyed thus killing hair's growth.

The latest method of electrolysis that has been perfected is called thermolysis, it operates via a short wave machine, the principle of which is to coagulate the hair papilla by high frequency current.
